

National College for Teaching & Leadership

Coaching partnerships, Jane Hamer transcript

Our project is very much about coaching partnerships and putting good to outstanding teachers together and asking them to identify problems and share good practice.

We did that across our alliance of schools for the first year, and for the second year, we're very much based on primary, secondary cross phase work as well as working within schools.

We found it very important, particularly at a time of performance related pay to promote a culture of sharing and mutual support. We found that it began to change the school culture, in that there was trust between teachers and a willingness to share problems and to share good practice.